Looking for Something Good to Read? Check out the NEW Student-Created Book Trailers on the HF Library Blog

Students in Kim Perisin's Reading classes have made it easier to find a great book! Using Animoto, a free online video-creation tool, they've created book trailers – sort of like “commercials” for books, complete with images and music. To view a few examples of the students' work, go to the HF Library blog, <http://www.hflibrary.blogspot.com/>

HF Celebrates National Library Week with a Special Event, Contest and Prizes

On April 14, HF parents, staff, students and community members gathered for a book discussion of The Last Lecture, our HF Reads title for third quarter. The book's editor, Beth Kujawski, joined us, and co-author Jeff Zaslow participated via speakerphone. We'd like to thank Karen Olson, Guidance, for calling on her generous colleagues in the publishing world to help us arrange this inspirational evening!

At the end of the week, nine lucky students won recyclable shopping bags filled with “green” products. Their names were chosen in a prize drawing celebrating this year's National Library Week theme, “Get Your Green On @ Your Library.” The winning students, all of whom answered “green trivia” questions correctly, are Jonathan Banks, Antwon Clayton, Antoine Crater, Melissa Daniels, Sarah Hall, Nicole Horney, Laura Nichols, Dylan LaFontane, and Chima Ugonna.

New Online Resource – Salem Psychology and Mental Health

This comprehensive five-volume set is now available in e-book format on the HF library homepage. It covers notable theories, people, social issues, life stages, the physiology and anatomy of the nervous system, and various mental illnesses or conditions. Find it on the HF library homepage under the “Online Databases and E-Books” link.

HF Library Awarded a We the People Bookshelf Grant

HF recently received a set of classic books from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The collection is centered on this year's theme, “A More Perfect Union.” The We the People grant program is dedicated to strengthening the teaching, study and understanding of American history and culture.
